Oldcastle Materials executive begins term as NAPA chairman

SCOTTDALE, Ariz. — John Keating, president and COO of Oldcastle Materials East, began his term as chairman of the National Asphalt Pavement Association (NAPA) board of directors at the organization's annual meeting on Monday.

“It is a privilege to lead this group of professionals and to represent our industry's best interests in our interactions with governments and other organizations,” Keating said. “NAPA gives all of us a chance to learn from one another and to help our own companies grow and improve, and I look forward to serving this year.”

Keating joined Oldcastle Materials in 1994 when it acquired his family's business. Prior to becoming president and COO of the company's East division in 2007, Keating had served as president of operations in Massachusetts and Rhode Island and as division president of the New England division.

NAPA was founded in 1955 and has more than 1,100 member companies. The Washington, D.C.-based organization represents asphalt producers and contractors in communication with the U.S. Congress, government agencies, and other national trade and business organizations. NAPA supports research to improve asphalt quality and paving techniques and provides members with training materials and courses.
